

THE NEW YORKER

Goings On About Town: Art

July 12 & 19, 2010

GALLERIES- CHELSEA

Ben Gocker

The show's title, "There Is Really No Single Poem," expresses the artist's everything-is-connected approach, as does the exuberant more-is-more pileup of objects. Gocker (a poet as well as an artist) has a day job as a librarian, so it's no surprise that text features prominently in his rainbow-bright show. A round white disk on the wall is inscribed with a multicolored swirl of names (the artist's friends and acquaintances). A long wooden table is lined with the covers of imaginary books, a project titled "Floating Collection." Through July 16.

Date: Through July 16

Venue: P.P.O.W

Venue Address: 511 W. 25th St., New York, N.Y.

Venue Phone: 212-647-1044

Read more: <http://www.newyorker.com/arts/events/art/ben-gocker-ppow#ixzz0svyfVLKi>